

Project Two: Medical Cost Prediction

Intuition and Approach

Medical expenses depend on several personal factors such as age, BMI (body mass index), smoking status, number of children, and region. These features affect a person's health risk and, consequently, their expected medical costs. By training a machine learning model on historical data, we can accurately estimate future medical charges for individuals with similar profiles.

Pipeline Diagram

